Canarian Sweetness

Ron Miel, which translates to "Honey Rum" in English, is an alcoholic beverage originating from the Canary Islands, often given as a free shot when paying the bill in restaurants. Crafted with expertise, this unique drink is a harmonious blend of two key ingredients: rum and honey.

The distinctive flavor profile is both sweet and smooth, displaying hues ranging from antique gold to intense mahogany. Historical records suggest that Ron Miel's origins trace back to the 7th century. During that period, blending rum with honey or fruit gained popularity, enhancing the drinkability of rum. Now, what exactly is it?

Rum or Liqueur?

When it comes to Ron Miel, the distinction between rum and liqueur is intriguing. With a maximum alcohol percentage of 30%, falling below the minimum 37.5% required for rum, it technically fits the profile of a honey liqueur. Despite aligning more with the liqueur category by European standards, Canarian producers have retained the original "Ron Miel" nomenclature. Interestingly, in Italy and other regions producing honey-infused rum, the label "rum and honey liqueur" is mandatory. To earn the title of authentic Ron Miel, a minimum of 2% bee honey must be infused into the rum.

Whether you classify it as rum or liqueur, one fact remains – it's a beloved and popular beverage. And for those enthusiasts looking to recreate this delightful drink at home, we've got a recipe for you.

How to make:

750 ml rum - 250 grams of honey
1 lemon - 1 cinnamon stick half a vanilla pod

Pour the honey into the rum and mix so that the ingredients dissolve into a single solution. Slice the zest of the lemon very thinly and add it to the mixture along with the vanilla and cinnamon sticks. Put the mixture in a container in a dark and cool place. Let it rest for at least 48 hours. Remove the lemon zest, cinnamon, and vanilla pod and filter the remaining liquid.

Try Ron Miel with a dollop of whipped cream and cinnamon. Cheers to homemade indulgence!

THURSDAY

New Sensation Rock Cafe | Corralejo

This bar delivers what it says on the tin, an evening of quality local rock musicians from different nations proving that music is the universal language of mankind. Andre Bernal is a powerhouse drummer with metronome-like timing, hitting a tight snare with great precision and doing perfect fills. This guy could command a job with any top rock band. Alle Campana is your Mr. Solid bass player, a groove player, that makes this rhythm section exceptional. Fulvio Sorrentino is a great guitarist because he always plays for the song and doesn't showboat. He is versatile and plays a nice slide guitar that many guitarists find difficult, he also knows the strat and telecaster bright sound and applies it to further the bands sound. A real team player. And now of course we come to Goran Spoljarev, a truly exceptional singer and keyboard player, combining tinkly piano with Hammond organ to string effects making him an incredible asset to any band with his combination of vast talents.

SUNDAY

Daniel Gerrard Cantante | Corralejo

It's not easy to play solo on guitar and try and entertain an audience so watching Daniel play his Spanish and Jazz rhythms to the backdrop of the sea was a relaxing chill out experience, much appreciated by the audience. Daniel knows his way around the fretboard and plays lots of different styles on his Spanish guitar .

SATURDAY

The Leftovers Sunset Lounge | Corralejo

The Leftovers are Eva Mancheva Hedley on lead vocals, Dave, her husband, on bass, Max Mansour on drums and Jelle Veirman on lead guitar. Eva has a soulful voice with good delivery and phrasing, and handles challenging numbers like 'Shallow' and 'Black Velvet' really well. Dave and Jelle chipped in with nice harmonies and some good individual displays on 'Long Train Running' and Jelle excelled on some instrumentals with really good techniques using controlled feedback and the tremolo arm combined and some tasty Wah Wah on 'Superstition' which Dave sang really well. They have a really good quality set, very energetic which the audience fully appreciated. The whole afternoon was a big success. The staff gave an excellent service and the ambience is a real treat for the tourists and locals.

SUNDAY

New Normal Sunset Lounge | Corralejo

Dave Hedley, Chip and Gary Woodward don't mess about and produce high octane stuff that grabs the audience and doesn't let go. Dave shows his wide ranging guitar skills throughout the whole set and shows the importance of not just being a musician but also being a great performer showcasing his great vocal range from Listen to the Music to Highway to Hell. Gary is my type of bass player, thumping the bass in a groove to keep the rhythm section solid. He also adds very accurate harmonies to the vocal experience. Chip showed he could handle different styles of drumming and shows his vocal talents on songs like the Weight, and real nice harmonies throughout. All in all a tremendous performance that wowed the packed crowd. We can thoroughly recommend this gig to tourists that want to start their holiday with a bang.

WEDNESDAY

Jam Session

Canela Cafe | Lajares

Francesco and his staff certainly had their hands full on this night as the bar was packed inside and out. There is a special vibe about the place. The service and the food were great and the musicians were excellent. The opening line up of drums, bass, trumpet, keyboards, flute, rhythm and lead guitar started with some jazz fusion grooves followed by Stand up by Bob Marley, Roadhouse Blues, and 70s disco to add to a really good variation of styles. Guests were added including a couple of rap singers and the band went into a session of dance music to get the crowd going. This is a great venue for tourists and locals alike and is totally unique in its presentation. The Jam session is every Wednesday between 10 PM and 2 AM and check the Gig Guide for further theme nights.

José Blanco & Daniel Gerrad Cordon Blue | Corralejo

Sitting outside on comfy sofas , watching the ocean and listening to the flamenco rhythms and Gypsy Kings style vocals from José was a great experience combined with Daniel's melodic Spanish guitar riffs, fills and accompaniment. Combine this with Eva's service with a smile, and Rafa's sense of humour behind the bar, gives this gig a winning combination.

CONCLUSION

Watching these excellent acts at these live music venues is testimony to the great cosmopolitan talent we have in Fuerteventura and we will be doing reviews on a monthly basis. Get in touch to share your own reviews, venues and favourite artists!

Popcorn Beach

This unique shoreline boasts a remarkable "sand" that closely resembles puffed-up popcorn. However, these kernels are not your typical beach sand; they are actually composed of coral fossils -calcareous algae- that have washed ashore.

Geological Wonder

These petite formations are scientifically known as "rhodoliths." The fascinating geological spectacle that shapes Popcorn Beach is the result of countless centuries of natural processes. Erosion, tides, and volcanic activities have all played their part in crafting this extraordinary landscape. Over time, the the ocean has meticulously polished these corals, bestowing upon them their distinctive shape and texture.

It's noteworthy that these rhodoliths grow underwater at an astonishing rate of just one millimeter per year. Therefore, when you encounter a section measuring 25 centimeters, you are witnessing a formation that has been developing for an impressive 250 years.

Ecological value

While it's perfectly acceptable to capture memories with these "popcorn" formations, it is strictly prohibited to take any of them with you and may incur penalties.. This prohibition is rooted in the profound ecological value of these coral granules. Moreover, the cavities within these corals serve as homes for the eggs of various marine creatures. Over time, these cavities erode, contributing to the formation of beach sand. Former President of Fuerteventura Sergio Lloret made a heartfelt appeal, emphasizing, "It is increasingly common to take a souvenir from the beaches of Fuerteventura, without knowing that every time a person takes a shell or other material, they are contributing to the imbalance of that ecosystem and, therefore, to the loss of biodiversity."

Must visit?

Yes! Popcorn Beach is an absolute natural wonder that deserves a place on your list of must-visit destinations. Its charm makes it an ideal stop, even though it's not your typical beach for swimming or sunbathing..

Please note

At Fuerteventura airport, officials diligently confiscate any sand, stones, or shells found in travelers' luggage. Expert staff are tasked with identifying the origin of these geological materials, and up to 600 kilograms of such materials are returned to the beaches and other locations on the island every month.

Ajuj

Ajuj, also known as Puerto de la Peña, is a delightful fishing village adorned with charming whitewashed houses, inviting fresh fish eateries, and, importantly, it has preserved its authentic charm, avoiding excessive tourist development. A true gem, providing a glimpse into local life and a peaceful atmosphere that is increasingly rare to find.

Ajuj has fine volcanic sand and formidable waves. Unfortunately, it carries the haunting moniker, Playa de Los Muertos - Beach of the Dead - due to the historical occurrence of drowned individuals brought there by powerful sea currents.

While it may not immediately appear as the most scenic spot in Fuerteventura, there's an unique charm to this place.

Oldest land in the Canary Islands

The Cuevas de Ajuj - Ajuj caves; are truly extraordinary. They hold significance as the oldest remnants of land in the Canary Islands and stand as the deepest caves in the region. Their geological origins precede the formation of the island of Fuerteventura itself, making them authentic natural relics. Surprisingly, this fact remains relatively unknown to the general public, representing a missed opportunity. These caves deserve greater recognition among visitors as a genuine geological wonder. Exploring rocks that are over 10,000 centuries old, emerging from depths of about 3,000 meters in the oceanic crust to rise above sea level, is a rare and unusual occurrence that shouldn't be overlooked.

According to the International Union of Geological Sciences, the presence of various igneous and volcanic sediments has earned Ajuy a place among the 150 areas of exceptional geological significance worldwide. This distinction led to its designation as a Natural Monument. But that's not all; it's also steeped in history and legend. Many pirates who sailed these waters reportedly hid their treasure here.

Moreover, in 1402, Ajuy was the strategic location chosen by Jean de Béthencourt for his invasion and conquest of the island, adding another layer of historical intrigue to this fascinating place.

Mirador de Ajuy

Embarking on the ascent towards the caves, you'll encounter the Mirador de Ajuy - a perfect vantage point for capturing breathtaking photos of the beach and the expansive ocean.

Immediately, you'll be captivated by intriguing dunes sculpted by erosion, composed of marine gastropod fossils and oceanic sediments. With the right tide, witness the sea surging into the blowholes, forcefully expelling water in a thunderous spectacle.

Lime kilns

The next noteworthy attraction includes two lime kilns integral to lime production, a crucial resource for whitewashing houses and a significant Majorero trade. Lime from these kilns was shipped to Gran Canaria and Tenerife from the adjacent pier, visible as you descend the stairs leading halfway to the caves. The remaining concrete beams served as supports for a ramp used to lower and load goods onto boats, providing splendid views of the cliffs.

Caves

Upon reaching the end of the path, you'll find a staircase leading down to the caves. Stepping inside is akin to a journey back to a prehistoric era. The caves boast colossal dimensions, and with a flashlight in hand, you can venture into some of the tunnels, exploring to significant depths.

After your exploration of these remarkable caves, it's highly advised to stay and witness the renowned sunset. Seated on such ancient soil, you'll likely experience the same feeling that the Mahos did centuries ago.

Nestled in the hills of the Betancuria Massif lies the Canary Islands' oldest town and Fuerteventura's historic heart:

Betancuria

Its old center, perched on a slope, stands as a unified historical monument.

The first capital of Fuerteventura

Betancuria served as Fuerteventura's first capital after Jean de Bethencourt's conquest of the island for Spain. Strategically located away from the coast to evade pirates, it thrived with a river providing essential water. Although intended for an archbishop who never arrived, it was for a long time the only congregation with a cathedral.

However, Betancuria faced adversity, suffering attacks by Berber pirates that left the town, including the cathedral, in ruins. Despite this, Betancuria resiliently rebuilt its place of worship and retained its administrative significance until 1834. Eventually, economic activity shifted to the east coast, leading to Betancuria's decline.

Notable archaeological finds include bones, fertility statues, pottery, and tools.

Ancient Monastery

To the north, you'll discover the remains of the Convento San Buenaventura chapel and monastery complex, built in the early 15th century. This site, which played a pivotal role in converting the island's population to Roman Catholicism, now stands forgotten and dilapidated.

Pine forest

Surprisingly, Fuerteventura boasts a forest – a result of reforestation efforts. The Zona Recreativa de Betancuria, a small pine forest with a picnic area and playground, lies between Betancuria and Vega de Río Palmas. Despite its differences from lush northern European forests, it's a popular spot for locals to relax.

Archaeological and Ethnographic Museum

The Museo de Betancuria, marked by two cannons confiscated from British invaders in 1740, delves into the Canary Islands' early European expeditions, Majoreros' material culture, and the prehistoric world.

Church of Santa Maria de Betancuria

The heart of the village houses the Santa Maria de Betancuria, the Canary Islands' first church (1426). Destroyed by pirates, remnants of the original structure can still be seen in the columns, bell tower, and tombstones. Inside, sculptures, carvings, Flemish paintings, and a small religious museum await.

The Canarian Islands, known today as a Spanish autonomous community, has a rich and ancient history that precedes its incorporation into Spain. Before the arrival of Spanish conquistadors, the Canarian Islands were inhabited by indigenous people who had their own names for these beautiful landmasses.

Let's journey back in time to uncover the ancient names of these islands and the civilizations that once thrived upon them.

Tenerife - Achineche

The name Tenerife is known to have two components, which, are believed to result from reading or printing errors: "Tener" meaning snow and "Fe" meaning mountain. Historians believe that these names were bestowed by its inhabitants, presumably when they gazed upon the snow-capped Teide in the distance. Others convey this information, mentioning that the natives referred to the island as Achinech. The Guanches called their island Achineche at the end of the 16th century, but the name that the people of La Palma gave it, Tenerife, ultimately prevailed.

Gran Canaria - Canaria

Traditionally, people have been told, that the name Canaria is linked to the presence of dogs on the islands. Chroniclers attest that there were "some wild dogs" in "Gran Canaria," resembling wolves but smaller in size.

The persistent claim that "Tamarán" is the pre-Conquest name for Gran Canaria is based on a misconception. This term is falsely attributed to the island's indigenous history. It was actually invented by the pseudo-historian Manuel Osuna Saviñón from Tenerife in the mid-nineteenth century.

La Palma - Benahoare

La Palma, often referred to as "La Isla Bonita" (The Beautiful Island), had the ancient name Benahoare which translates to homeland in the language of the indigenous people of the island.

Unveiling the Ancient Names of the Canary Islands

Fuerteventura – Erbania or Maxorata

Fuerteventura was known as Erbania in the language of the Guanches. This name may have been derived from the word “erban,” which means desert or dry land, though its autochthonous origin remains uncertain.

Lanzarote - Tyterogata

Lanzarote was known as Tyterogata reflecting the island's volcanic origins and the challenges its early inhabitants faced in adapting to its unique environment.

La Gomera - Gomera

La Gomera, in contrast to some other islands, retained a name very similar to its ancient designation. The island was known as Gomera, a name that has persisted through the centuries. Historians suggest that the Africans bestowed this name upon the island when they settled there.

This map of the Canary Islands was published in the French, Spanish and German edition of the Atlas Maior by Joan Blaeu (1598-1673).

Islands

El Hierro – Eseró or Efero

El Hierro, the smallest and westernmost of the Canary Islands, was referred to as Eseró by the Guanches. This name hints at the island's rugged and untamed nature.

Even after the conquest of Gran Canaria in 1483, the term “Canarian” continued to be used to describe the people of the islands, although each island's natives had their own distinct names:

- Maxos or Mahos referred to those from Lanzarote and Fuerteventura.
- Canaries denoted those from Gran Canaria.
- Guanches were the people of Tenerife.
- Gomeros La Gomera.
- Auritas were the inhabitants of La Palma.
- Bimbaches were those from El Hierro.

These ancient names provide a glimpse into the diverse cultures and languages that flourished in the Canary Islands long before they became a part of Spain.

While the names may have changed, the Canarian Islands continue to be a place of unique beauty, culture, and history. Exploring these ancient names allows us to appreciate the rich tapestry of civilizations that once called these islands home, leaving a lasting legacy that still resonates in the vibrant culture of the Canaries today.

Guise and Ayose

Fuerteventura's Monarchs

Heading down the highway toward Betancuria, you'll come across the Mirador de Guise y Ayose, just after the entrance to Morro Velosa. The remarkable sculptures, an impressive 4.5 meters high, are the artistic creations of Emiliano Hernández.

Pre-conquest, Fuerteventura was split into two realms: Jandía in the South and Maxorata in the North, each governed by the ancient Maho kings, Guise and Ayose. In the vicinity of the bronze statues honoring these esteemed aboriginal monarchs, there's a belief that an extensive wall once stood. This wall, constructed by early settlers, served as a visible marker, instantly recognizing the boundaries between the two kingdoms.

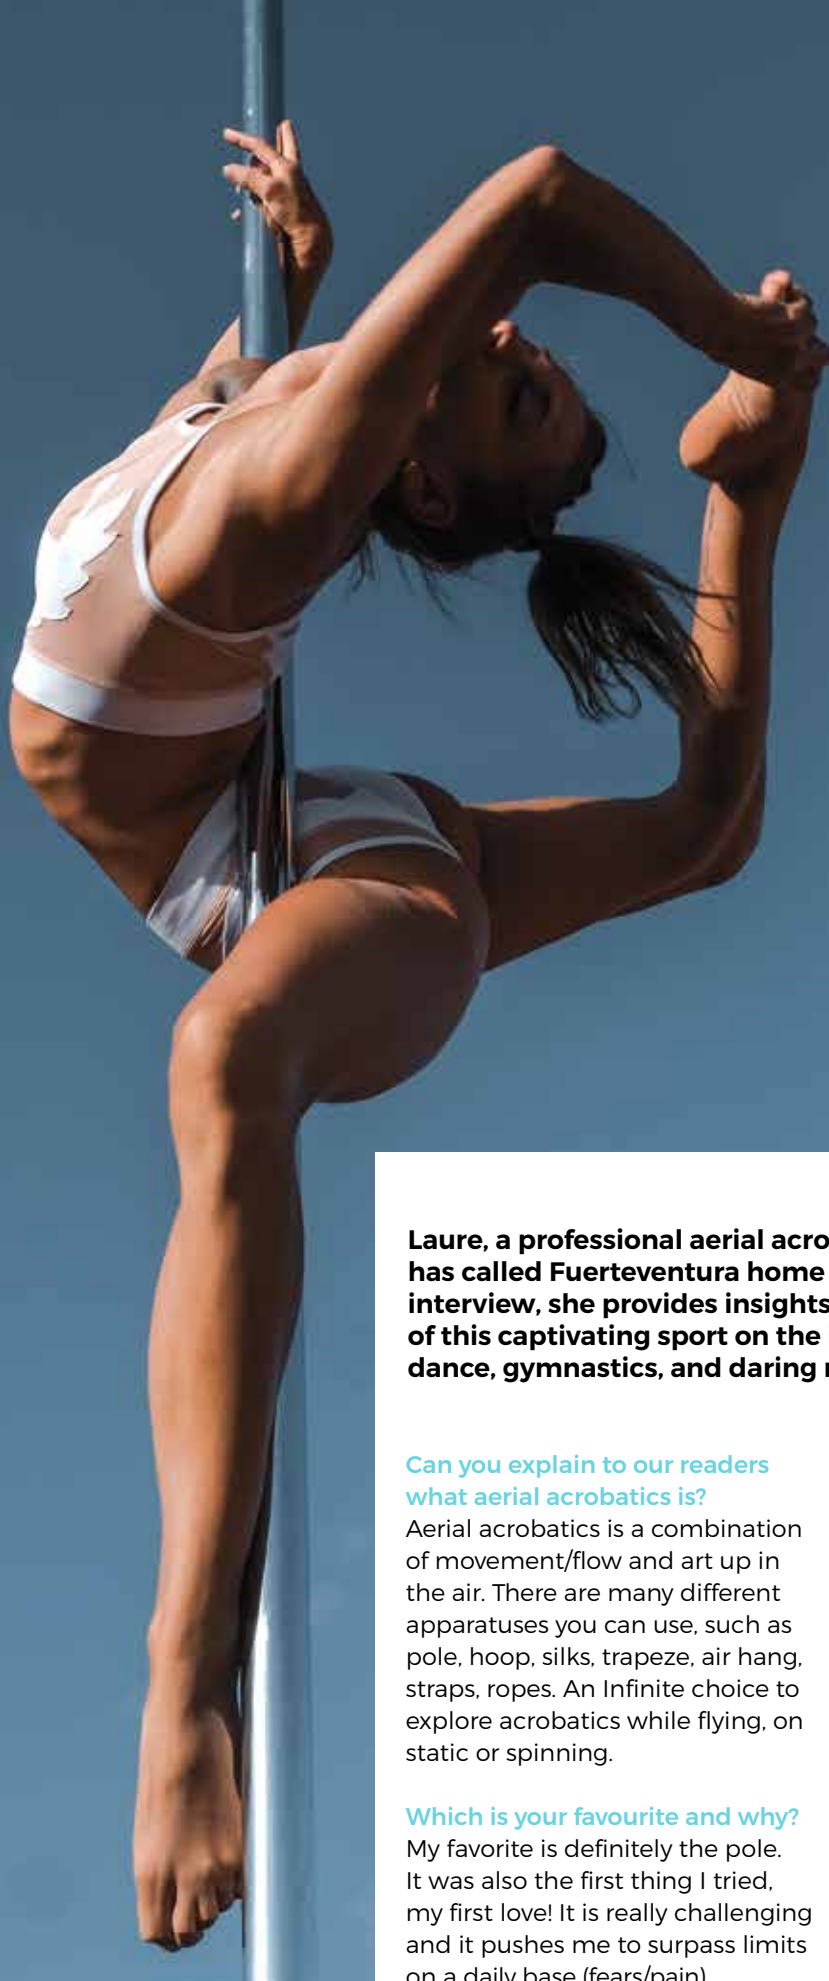

The ongoing debates and conflicts between the two kings necessitated the construction of the wall. This served to prevent the livestock of one monarch from encroaching on the precious pastures of the other during times of scarcity and drought.

One day, numerous boats reached the shores of Erbania's coast - now known as Fuerteventura. Tibiabín, a priestess from the village, alerted Guise and Ayose about the potential dangers posed by the arriving men and the consequences if they resisted the demands brought by the sea-faring group.

According to historical accounts, when the conquerors Juan de Bethencourt and Gadifer de la Salle landed on Fuerteventura, Guise and Ayose fiercely resisted, putting up a determined fight to safeguard their land from being taken over.

Following an extended conflict, the indigenous kings were captured and underwent baptism, alongside the priestess Tibiabín herself. As time passed, Tibiabín vanished from the island, purportedly abducted by pirates. Her daughter, Tamonante, another revered aboriginal priestess, unable to bear the void left by her mother's absence, tragically threw herself into the Janubio Ravine.

and Christian Brandes*

Laure, a professional aerial acrobat with French heritage, has called Fuerteventura home for the past six years. In this interview, she provides insights into the growing popularity of this captivating sport on the island, known for its fusion of dance, gymnastics, and daring mid-air stunts.

Can you explain to our readers what aerial acrobatics is?

Aerial acrobatics is a combination of movement/flow and art up in the air. There are many different apparatuses you can use, such as pole, hoop, silks, trapeze, air hang, straps, ropes. An Infinite choice to explore acrobatics while flying, on static or spinning.

Which is your favourite and why?

My favorite is definitely the pole. It was also the first thing I tried, my first love! It is really challenging and it pushes me to surpass limits on a daily base (fears/pain). It is an artistic sport and the combinations of moves and creatlons are unlimited.

How long ago did you start, and how did you get into this?

I started pole dancing 7 years ago. I always wanted to try it but it wasn't that popular back then. I fell in love with it the first time I tried it because it reminded me so much of gymnastics, which I practiced for 12 years as a kid, and I really missed it.

How do you discipline yourself to stay fit and what training do you do on a daily basis?

I train flexibility and mobility about three times a week. I don't like cardio or weight lifting. I need to feel free and creative while doing sports!

I need to feel free and creative...

Do you choreograph your own routines and if so who is your inspiration?

Yes, I create my own choreography. I mostly find inspiration on Instagram where I follow many pole dancers from around the world.

You're also an aerial acrobatic teacher – what specifically do you teach?

I teach flexibility, pole dance and aerial hoop.

What is the most significant misconception people have about aerial acrobatics?

Misconceptions people have, I would say is the work and discipline you need to put into it to be able to get some level. Nothing comes from nothing - if you have the motivation everything is possible in this life!

If you need to stop tomorrow doing aerial acrobatics, what will you do?

That would be really difficult for me. I've got a bad knee tendonitis, but I still try to move, do some yoga/flexibility, and less acrobatics to give my body some time to recover.

Is there anything you'd like to say specifically to our readers?

Aerial acrobatics is definitely for everyone who'd like to surpass their limits. It's a sport where you can have fun without people judging you.

“Come as you are.
Create, be yourself and enjoy! “

Do you also perform at events, championships/ tournaments and if so, do you have a team you work with or is it just you?

Yes, I work with co-teachers from my school, and other artists who live here on the island. People can hire us for special events such as shows nights, concerts, birthdays, weddings, retreats or circus shows.

If somebody is interested in having a teaser class to see if this is something they'd like to do, where and when can they find you?

If you'd like a trial class you can find me at our school Manipura Circus, Calle Galicia 6 in Corralejo. You can also find me on Instagram @laurespole or contact me through www.manipura.es

Aerial acrobatics: a mesmerizing art form and sport that combines physical prowess, artistic expression, and a touch of magic. It continues to captivate audiences around the world, and with more people getting involved, it's a trend that's here to stay. Whether you're an avid fan or just curious about trying it yourself, it's an exciting world worth exploring.

WINTER

Fuerteventura is often associated with sun-soaked summers, its charm doesn't fade when winter arrives. In fact, during the winter months Fuerteventura offers a unique and more peaceful experience for those seeking a tranquil escape.

Corralejo, for example, an annual parade along the main street involves both the young and old, with the 'three kings' playing a central role. It's a joyous event embraced by the community and a must visit when you're on the island.

Festivities

The winter months offer a chance to engage with the island's traditions and festivals. While the island doesn't have the busy festivities of summer, you can still partake in local celebrations such as New Year's Eve and the parade of the Three Kings.

Christmas in Fuerteventura, much like the rest of Spain, is all about cherishing togetherness and relishing a hearty family dinner on Christmas Eve (known as Nochebuena) before or after attending evening mass.

One unique aspect of Spanish Christmas traditions is the celebration of Three Kings Day (Día de los Reyes) on January 6th. This is when gift-giving takes place, with the "Three Wise Men" delivering presents to children. In Supermarkets are well-stocked with special Christmas treats like turrón (nougat), polvorones (shortbread), and other festive sweets. There's also a focus on fresh ingredients for traditional holiday dishes. Most supermarkets remain open on the 24th and 25th of December but tend to close earlier, aligning with other tourist-oriented businesses.

Shopping

Traditional Christmas markets, known as mercadillos, pop up across the island. These markets are adorned with colorful decorations, twinkling lights, and various stalls selling a wide range of goods, from handmade crafts to holiday delicacies.

The weeks leading up to the 6th of January are a prime time for gift shopping. You'll find a wide variety of options in stores, from toys for children to thoughtful gifts for adults.

After the holiday season, a sales season known as "Rebajas" begins. This is a great time to find discounts on a wide variety of products, making it an attractive period for bargain hunters.

Fuerteventura offers a distinct natural wonder as unique as the island itself

Charcos

Charcos, meaning “puddles” or “pools” in Spanish, are rock formations sculpted by the power of the Atlantic Ocean over countless centuries. While many of these treasures remain hidden and challenging to access, we’ve uncovered six charcos that are within reach, inviting you to experience their beauty.

Charco Playa de la Mujer

Along the coast near Tindaya lies Playa de la Mujer, a spot favored by both locals and tourists alike. As the tides recede, a natural pool is formed, sheltered from the ocean’s waves by volcanic rocks.

Playa de los Charcos El Cotillo

El Cotillo is another hotspot for natural swimming pools. Here you can explore a series of pools that vary in size and depth. The calm waters and surroundings make it a haven for families seeking a day by the sea.

Charcos de Ajuy

Apart from the intriguing caves and the alluring black sand beach, Ajuy boasts the presence of stunning charcos which also require a bit of climbing and scrambling, but with sturdy footwear and the freedom to use both hands, it’s a manageable adventure.

Roque del Moro Cofete

Tucked away in the heart of Jandia Natural Park, identifiable by a rock formation at the terminus of the 14-kilometer-long beach. To access this gem, you can embark on an off-road drive along a rugged path or opt for a 3-kilometer hike through a small canyon.

Charco Caleta de Fuste

Just north of Caleta de Fuste, this hidden gem graces the coastline. Reaching this tranquil haven involves a bit of climbing and scrambling, but the reward is a refreshing dip in the pristine waters.

Charco de Aguas Verdes

A chance to enjoy a leisurely swim in a breathtaking setting. Its waters remain impeccably clear, thanks to the constant renewal by the lapping waves.

Safety first

Understanding that charcos reveal their splendor during low tide is key. Thus, it’s essential to monitor the tide conditions before and during your visit. While some charcos may seem shallow, it’s wise to keep a watchful eye on children.

Respecting nature’s gifts

These natural swimming pools are fragile ecosystems. Please avoid leaving any litter behind, and respect the local flora and fauna. Many of these pools are not well-marked, so it’s advisable to check local guides or seek advice from residents to locate them safely.

Whether you’re looking for a spot to relax or an adventurous journey to reach hidden gems, these pools offer a truly immersive experience.

While Fuerteventura may appear arid and desolate, appearances can be deceiving.

This island boasts the highest number of bird species across the entire Canary archipelago. Consequently, it holds significant importance for scientific research and conservation efforts, with almost 300 species of endemic, migratory, and nesting birds along its coastal and inland regions.

Feathered beauties

Much like Africa's 'big five' are a highlight for safaris, Fuerteventura offers the 'big five' for birdwatchers: The Fuerteventura chat (Saxicola dacotiae), the Corredor Sahariano (Cursorius cursor), the Canarian Houbara (Chlamydotis undulata fuertaventurae), the Canary Blue Tit (Cyanistes teneriffae) and the Black bellied Sandgrouse (Pterocles orientalis).

We would like to add the Canary Egyptian Vulture, the Trumpeter bullfinch and the Hoopoe to this list, as spotting these birds is an absolute joy.

From the shy Cream-colored Courser to the colorful Fuerteventura chat and from the impressive Egyptian vulture to the endangered Canary Blue Tit - all these feathered beauties make Fuerteventura their home.

DID YOU KNOW?

Besides this cute little bird, Caldereta is also the name of a small village in the municipality of La Oliva and the meaning of the word, translated to English, is 'stew'. If you ever see "Caldereta de cordero" somewhere on the menu, you will not get this bird on your plate, but a goat meat stew.

Corky came to the island of Fuerteventura to windsurf in 1991. In 1993, he opened "Corky's Surf Bar", which he had for almost 15 years. It was the meeting point for surfers in the early days when the main street in Corralejo had two-way traffic with only sand and tumbleweed blowing Western style along the streets. After these crazy years and even crazier parties, Corky's life has changed a bit...

“ We need to sail or go crazy!”

Corky, you're a professional windsurfer. How did you get started?

I started back home in Newcastle, UK. I was always at the beach when there was a storm. Practicing, even all through the winter months, with snow on the beaches.

How did you manage to make it your profession?

It all happened slowly. I was training all the time in Newcastle and even lived in Tarifa, Southern Spain, for a year in my van to get better in strong winds.

I slowly picked up help from shops and sponsors as I trained and tried to get photos in the UK windsurf mags as often as I could.

Like in any profession things are going on behind the scenes – it's not just surfing, right?

It's basically a job to me. There's so much involved behind the scenes. People don't get that. Your sponsors require a lot of feedback and regular photoshoots of all the latest gear. Now, with social media, Instagram, Facebook e.g everything has developed. The contracts tell you what is expected:

press releases, trips, photos, and weekly updates on social media of you in action on or off the water. Basically, selling all the gear to potential customers on and off the beach. I'm super lucky that I have been fully sponsored for a long time now, but I have worked hard to get to this point. It doesn't come freely. My latest International sponsor, @rrdwatersports, stepped in to make me an ambassador to promote them recently on my annual photoshoot to Tíre, Scotland. Now I'm home in Fuerteventura to carry on the advertising daily at all the hot spots we have here.

What is your biggest challenge being a pro windsurfer?

I think the biggest challenge is always being on standby to go. When the conditions are good, we need to sail or go crazy! Staying fit and injury-free is super important, too.

Your best windsurfing experience(s)?

I had far too many insane experiences. I've never been a competition sailor. I prefer to free-sail, enjoy, and concentrate on getting good photos. Being British Expression Champion 3x, for sure, helped me gain deals with sponsors, but it's the free sailing that makes me happy. Sailing new spots with friends and special trips like Puerto Rico, The Shacks, Ireland - Brandon Bay, Jameos del Agua, Tíre Inner Hebrides in Scotland.

Your worst windsurfing experience(s)?

My worst experience was being stuck on the outside at El Cotillo one winter. The waves were too big to sail back in... They were up to 8 meters. I had to wait for a lull in the sets and sail in as quick as possible, with no room for error. That one I will never forget.

What do you like to do besides windsurfing?

When there's no wind, rest!!! I love to fish on my paddleboard when there's no wind. Paddle boarding also keeps cardio up.

What is the most significant misconception people have about windsurfing?

Misconception about windsurfing... mmm... Maybe that it's for people who can't surf, but most of us do or started with surfing. Also, maybe that it's an expensive sport, but to start off, if you want to learn it, you can buy all the gear anywhere really cheaply nowadays.

Why Fuerteventura? Are you going to stay? Any plans for the future?

Fuerteventura was always the place I intended to go to. I still remember I only had photos of Fuerte beaches - El Cotillo, shooting gallery, Glass beach... - on my bedroom walls. It's surreal that I'm still here and yes, I intend to stay! Why not...

Anything you would like to say to our readers?

You only have one life, so if you want to move abroad or live here, you can. Just plan it and make your dreams come true. I did it. FUERTEVENTURA really is a water sports paradise! Of course, I would like to thank all my sponsors @rrdwatersports @vwcanarias @dakine_wind @secretoenergy @k4fins @geckoheadgear and @mission.info for their support!

From his thrill of catching the perfect wind to his connection with Fuerteventura, Corky leaves us with a profound appreciation for the harmony between skill and the island. Be sure to check out the ocean when you see his van parked somewhere along the shore. He might be out there sailing the waves of his next challenge.
